BURSON AUTHOR OF A NEW BONUS BILL OFFERED IN HOUSE

Designed To Adjust
Compensation, Would
Cost About Half of the
Other Plan, He Says.

PLAN IS EXPLAINED

By BENNETH CLARK
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

Washington, Jan. 14.—A brand new revised bonus bill made its appearance in Congress today, irrespective of the plans of Administration leaders to jam tax reduction legislation through ahead of any bonus legislation.

The new measure, differing materially from any of those heretofore offered, was authored by Senator Burson, Republican of New Mexico, a so-called "regular." It would cost the Government approximately $1,400,000,000, or about two billion dollars less than the estimated cost of the bill voted by the late President Harding which has been re-introduced in the House this session.

Fundamentally Burson's bill is designed to adjust compensation of veterans to equalize payments to those who stayed at home to work in the industries.

SENATOR NORRIS INTRODUCES FIRST OF RAIL OWNERSHIP BILLS IN SENATE

Plan Calls For Creation
of Two Great Across
Continent Trunk Lines
Under Federal Control.

IT HAS NO CHANCE

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

Washington, Jan. 14.—The Progressive insurgents today exploded a bombshell in Congress in the form of a proposal for government ownership of railroads.

Creation of a gigantic government corporation to operate two trans-continental trunk lines criss-crossing the nation from the Atlantic to Pacific and from Canada to the Gulf, was proposed by Senator George W. Norris, Republican of Nebraska, progressive leader, in a bill he introduced in the Senate.

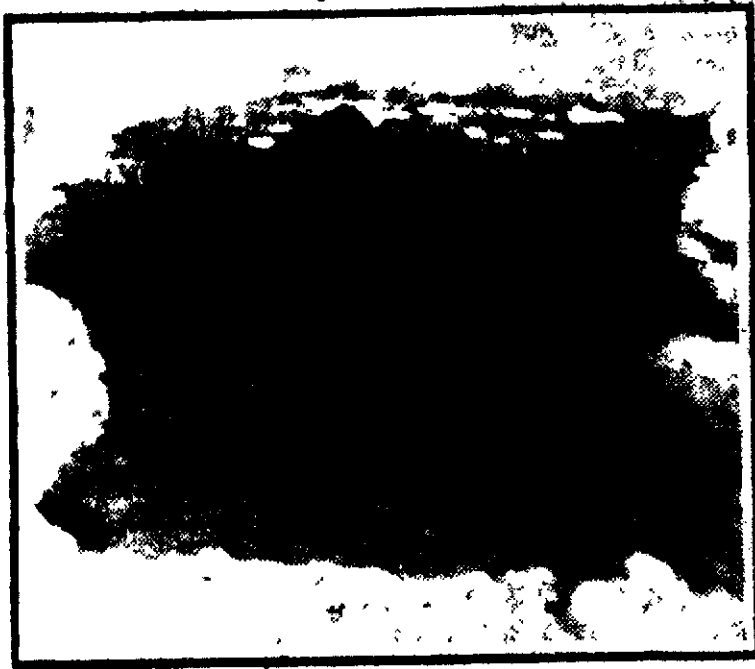

The corporation would be given a maximum capitalization of $5,000,000,000 and power to condemn, purchase or lease such privately owned railroad as found necessary to create the two federal trunk lines. It would also have power to acquire and operate power plants and coal mines, necessary to supply fuel.

A five-man directorship, each receiving $12,000 annual salary, would be formed to control the corporation. They would be appointed by the President on the same conditions affecting cabinet officers and ambassadors, "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate." These five men would have sole handling of the corporation's finances, operation and management, and severe penalties would be laid out for misdeeds.

So that the corporation could control export shipments, the bill would turn over to it all government-owned ships, whether in ocean service or used in rivers or lakes. This authorization incidentally would wipe out the United States Shipping Board and the United States Fleet Corporation.

Although a majority of the Senate insurgents support the bill they held small hope for its enactment.

FIRST MEETING OF REPARATION BODY CALLED BY DAWES

Less Concerned Now
With German Ability
To Pay Than Courage
To Act, Says Dawes.

FOR COMMON SENSE

By FRANK M. MASON
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
Paris, Jan. 14.—The inter-allied committee of experts summoned by the allied reparations commission to examine Germany's capacity for reparations payments, held its first meeting today under the presidency of Charles G. Dawes, of Chicago, who demanded a common sense agreement.

The committee met at 11 o'clock. "We are practical men, free from all political prejudice," declared Dawes. "I hope this inquiry will be conducted along the lines indicated by common sense. The success of this committee depends on whether the public mind and conscience of the allies there is adequate conception of the great disaster which faces each allied nation unless common sense is crowned king."

"For the moment we are less concerned with Germany's present capacity for payment than this committee's present capacity for courage to act."

The committee will examine means of balancing the German budget. It is likely that sessions of the committee will be held in Berlin and other German cities as well as Paris. Dawes continued: "I have read with shame and humiliation the outpouring of American nationalistic demagogues who undertake to lecture Europe in order to lift themselves to some petty office or to maintain political popularity. "We have found an impenetrable, colossal fog band in economic opinion, based upon premises of fact which has changed, making the bulk of the premises worthless."

KELLOGG ESCHEWS KNICKERBOCKERS FOR 'SOUP AND FISH'

By DAVID M. CHURCH
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
Ambassador Kellogg, unlike his predecessor, George Harvey, eschewed knickerbockers. He and his staff appeared in full evening dress.

Major General Handley Williams, marshal of the diplomatic corps called at the Claridge hotel for Ambassador Kellogg attired in a brilliant uniform of scarlet with cape and tunic. Numerous medals blazed upon his breast.

There were three royal coaches with prancing black horses and postillion riders. The royal footmen wore uniforms of gold and scarlet with cocked hats.

The procession from the Claridge to the palace was Cinderella-like in its pageantry.

After the official business a reception was held at the palace. Ambassador and Mrs. Kellogg were invited to lunch with King George and Queen Mary.

Don Mahaffey, one of Mahaffey's bustling business men, transacted business here on Saturday.

Mine Fire Endangers All Buildings of The University of Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14. (INS.)—The buildings of the University of Pittsburgh here were threatened with destruction today when a fire, which has been raging more than two weeks in an abandoned mine underlying the campus, broke through the surface emitting large volumes of smoke and flame like a miniature volcano. Experts at the U. S. Bureau of Mines here were summoned to aid in checking the fire which it is feared may spread through the entire workings which underlie virtually the entire campus.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Wilson spent the week-end in Pittsburgh with Mr. and Mrs. Janssen. They were present at the christening of Alexander Patton Janssen, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Janssen.

Mrs. F. G. Betts has returned from Greensburg where she visited her sister, Mrs. March.

QUICK SUNDAY IS ENJOYED BY PEOPLE OF PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia, Jan. 14. (INS.)—The first week of General Smedley D. Butler's whirlwind drive against vice here resulted in 484 raids on saloons, speakeasies, gambling and disorderly houses.

The number of week-end arrests for drunkenness dropped 14 per cent as a result of the campaign. There were no spectacular acts of banditry during the last few days. It was the first week-end period in many months that Philadelphia has not enjoyed at least one daylight payroll robbery.

Some saloons were reported "open" today but not selling liquor.

Gen. Butler took a rest yesterday at his temporary home in Overbrook. Today he will go to Quantico, Va., for a few hours on Marine business. He will return within a short time to Philadelphia. Police activity, however, will not cease because of his absence, he announced.

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 14. (INS.)—Joseph Bolvin, 38, is held today as a fugitive from Beaver Falls, Pa., after having been trailed here by Ros H. Prusky, Beaver Falls, from whom he is alleged to have swindled $3,200 by selling him a "money-making machine."

BUT LITTLE BIT OF T.B. FOUND IN CATTLE OF JEFFERSON COUNTY

Pennsylv., Jan. 14.—As a result of the first day's tuberculosis tests of cattle in five townships Jefferson County may come under the modified plan, which means that the county will not be subject to the testing of cattle for three year periods. If the rest of the county shows the less than 1-2 of 1 per cent of reactors shown in the first reports.

Reports made to J. P. Winslow, county agent, by 22 veterinarians of the county show that out of 2,000 cattle tested only 13 were re-actors. The townships in which these tests were made include Rose, Warsaw, Washington, Pinecreek and Bell. All of the tests were made last Monday, and farmers, with the exception of McCalmont and Beaver, co-operated well. In these two townships a misunderstanding and some adverse propaganda made cattle owners a trifle obstreperous.

If the tests to be held from now until the end of next week are as favorable as the first ones Jefferson county may be the first county in Pennsylvania to come under the modified plan and one of the few in the United States. It is a distinct honor to farmers and cattle owners of this section of the State.

The next townships to come under the tests will be Union and Gaskill. Bell, tested Monday, showed but one reactor.

THE "Y" WILL HAVE A REPRESENTATIVE BASKETBALL TEAM

Announcement was made at the "Y" this morning that a varsity team would be formed to represent the local Association on the basketball court this winter. The Physical Department Committee have decided to put a representative Y team in the field and to give Clearfield fans the best type of basketball which the Association can produce. There is no doubt but that a fast aggregation can be picked for there are many good players in the city which are not connected with any team and which would be anxious to get lined up in their favorite sport. Tryouts are to be held in the gymnasium tomorrow night at 8:15, open to any local player. A good number have already expressed their desire of coming out. James Mitchell Jr., chairman of the basketball Committee and Physical Director Shannon will look them over and take charge of the team.

It has not been decided on which night of the week games will be played but the schedule will be arranged so as not to conflict with any other local games. There are many close Associations and Independent teams which will be gotten in touch with immediately and no doubt a fast schedule can be lined up.

MIMIC "WAR" ON PANAMA CANAL IS OFFICIALLY DECLARED TODAY AND SHIPS SWING INTO BATTLE ARRAY

By JAMES I. KELGALLAN

On Heard U. S. S. Quibria, Panama Canal Zone, by Radio—Jan. 14.—Mimic "war" was officially declared today to that the defenses of the Panama Canal against the great armada of American warships that are engaged in maneuvers.

It was explained that the first "battle" would take place at Colon, or try to land an expeditionary force at the eastern end of the waterway.

The "Blackfleet" representing the enemy was expected to clash with the Panama naval district force guarding the eastern entrance to the canal.

The "Blackfleet" which is superior in strength is expected to sink the Panama Naval forces. The next move of the Blackfleet is problematical. It may boldly attack the harbor or try to land an expeditionary force of marines.

JUDGE CHASE PUTS A SHIVER IN SPINE OF BOOTLEGGER BY SAYING '4 MONTHS'

Clearfield county is going to be "the enemy's country" for all moonshiners and bootleggers during the term of Hon. A. R. Chase as President Judge of the courts of the county, judging from the way in which Judge Chase measured out even-handed justice to the first illegal liquor manufacturer and purveyor to face him for sentence.

At December term of criminal court Barney Gill, Chief of Police of Calport, was convicted of violation of the liquor law and sentenced by Judge Bell to pay a fine of $100 and costs and to serve eight months in jail, with the provision that he might apply for a parole at the end of 4 months upon payment of the fine and costs in the case.

The principal witness against Gill was one Josh Bloom, of Madera, who

MAGNUS JOHNSON THINKS PEPPER LIVES IN ALLEY

When Senator Magnus Johnson, of Philadelphia, last week addressed a group of bankers, he was the guest of Senator Pepper. At the conclusion of his address, Senator Johnson started out with Senator Pepper for life latter's home.

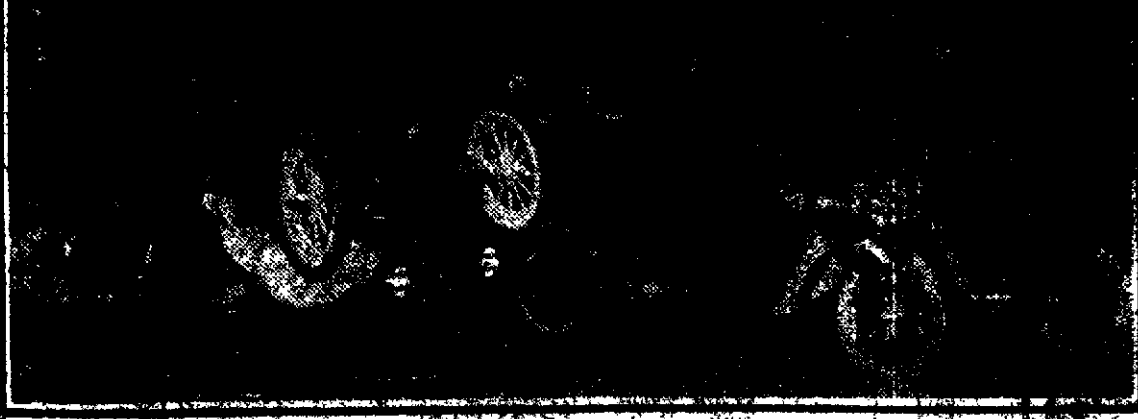

"Well, Senator, I guess you live in a palace," Johnson said to his host. "I don't know how to behave in one of those palaces. What shall I do?"

"Just wait a minute,"

Then Pepper led his guest up the narrow passageway that is Panama street and pointed to his "palace," a modest three-story building recently renovated to resemble a quaint English country home.

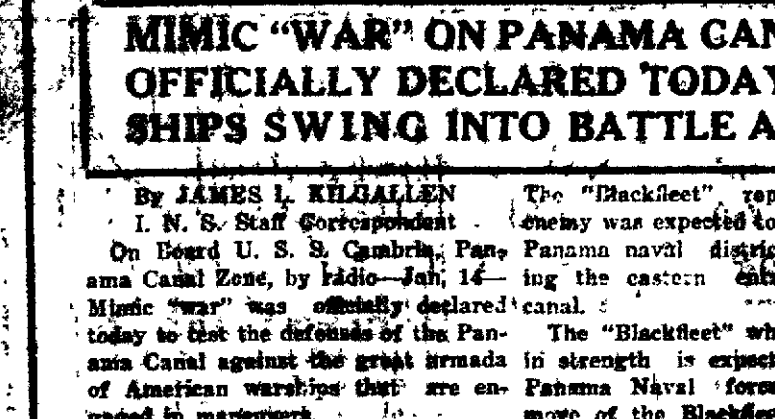

"Senator, you live in an alley," Senator Johnson gasped.

DEATH OF FRANKIE JEROME

Young McDonald of Albany from a blow over the heart from "Toddy" Mick, also of Albany, in 1917 that the last boxing law was repealed and it is feared that an investigation of the present circumstances will not help the sport.

According to some accounts, Jerome should not have been allowed to enter the ring Friday night. His personal friends, endeavoring to account for his knockout at the hands of Taylor in the twelfth round, declared that he had been suffering from a severe attack of indigestion since 3 o'clock that afternoon and had eaten no supper. The official physician, appointed by the boxing commission to Madison Square Garden bouts to examine all fighters before entering the ring, gave Jerome a clean bill of health, it is assumed.

The fighter took a severe beating from Taylor but by no means a necessarily fatal one. In fact he had rallied in the eighth, ninth and tenth rounds and was carrying the fight to Taylor when he was knocked down with a right hand punch to the jaw. He arose to his feet, groggy at the count of nine, but the bell rang, ending the round, before Taylor could strike another blow.

Jerome could barely reach his corner to gain the minute's respite between rounds, yet he was sent reeling out by his seconds only to collapse under a fusillade of blows. Most of them landed on his shoulders and back, Jerome retaining the fighter's instinct to cover up.

Clutching the ropes, he pulled himself to his feet at the count of nine and reeled toward his antagonist. The referee, Jack O'Sullivan, intervened and stopped the bout. Jerome was carried to his corner unconscious, and first aid methods failed to rouse him. He was carried to his dressing room and failing to respond to treatment there, was taken to Bellevue hospital.

There his case was diagnosed as "physical overtaxation and exhaustion" and it was believed that a few days' confinement at the institution would result in his recovering his strength and health.

Jerome's real name was Frank Doherty, suffered a cerebral hemorrhage late Saturday night and his condition steadily becoming worse as an unsuccessful operation was performed by Dr. John Stewart, brain specialist. Jerome did not recover consciousness after the operation and died at 1:30 o'clock. His mother, his wife and Billy Gibson, his former manager, were with the fighter at the end.

An autopsy will be performed this morning to determine the exact cause of death.

No arrests have been made up to the present. Taylor and his manager, Eddie Kane, left for the west on Saturday morning, having been assured that Jerome was all right.

Just what action may be taken by the New York State Athletic Commission is one of the developments that remain to be cleared up today. Wm. McCormick, chairman of the license commission and tacit head of the commission, could not be reached for a statement but it is likely that a special meeting of the commission will be called to consider the case.

Tex Rickard, in whose arena the fatal fight was held, deplored the death of the boxer, after calling personally upon Mrs. Doherty to condole with her. Rickard said that it was the first fight held under his auspices in which a fighter had been seriously injured.

New York, Jan. 14. (INS.)—Concussion of the brain and rupture of a small vein in the brain caused the death of Frankie Jerome, New York boxer who died as a result of injuries received Friday night in a boxing bout with Bud Taylor, Terre Haute, Indiana.

This conclusion was reached today by Dr. Charles Norris, chief medical examiner, who performed an autopsy. "There was no evidence that Jerome was in poor physical condition," Norris said, "although that would not necessarily be brought out by an autopsy."

BURSUM AUTHOR OF NEW BONUS BILL

It would provide four chief pay items to veterans:

1. A refund of enforcement allotments ranging from $5 to $15 a month deducted from the pay of the soldier, applying to about 50 percent of the veterans.

2. A refund amounting to $8 a month on account of premiums paid for insurance while in the service applying to practically all of the veterans.

3. Indemnity for the veteran caused on account of losses by the purchases of subscriptions of liberty bonds while in the service at the rate of $10 for each $50 not exceeding $20 in the aggregate.

4. Payment to the veterans of $2 a month for each month in the service to equalize similar payment made to civil employees earning less than $2500 during the war.

The payment would be made in cash over a period of four years, one fourth of the number of veterans to be paid each year in full, four and one half per cent interest to be paid on all deferred payments.

The veterans further would be given the option of taking cash or paid up life insurance on the basis of $400 of insurance for each $100 of cash due the soldier, payable at death, or may be surrendered after twenty years for cash value, based upon the annual premiums plus four per cent American Mortality Actuary tables. The Government would be required to pay the annual premiums and to invest such premiums in approved securities.

Bursum estimated that 75 per cent of the veterans would choose life insurance policies and upon this basis the cost to the Government would be approximately $125,000,000 each year for the first four years and thereafter approximately $60,000,000 annually for the succeeding sixteen years.

Bursum declared he would demand early action by the Senate.

Southern Educator Is Bryan's Choice

Their friends were curious, but not enthusiastic and nowhere was there any indication of alarm, on the part of those who are laboring in behalf of William G. McAdoo, Oscar Underwood and the half dozen other potential candidates whose names figure in Democratic speculation.

"Who is he?" and "What is behind it?" were two questions that almost invariably met the inquirer.

That so astute a politician as the commoner would not lead a dash from the table without having some purpose in mind was generally accepted among the Democrats here. And lacking any details of Colonel Bryan's plans, the consensus of opinion appeared to be that Bryan intended placing Dr. Murphy in the Florida primaries as a favorite son in order to prevent either the McAdoo or Underwood from gaining control of the Florida delegation.

Bryan's attitude toward the so-called major Democratic candidates, McAdoo, Underwood, Oak, Ralston and Davis, has not been clearly defined, except in the case of Underwood, whom the colonel strongly opposes. The McAdoo people have privately declared that when the time comes Bryan will be found in their camp, but Bryan himself has not confirmed this.

topsy. I believe however that he was too finely trained."

Claims of friends of Jerome that he had been ill and had not eaten before the bout were not borne out at the autopsy, Norris said.

"However, one cannot say whether these claims are true as the boxer was stricken Friday and did not die until Sunday," he said.

Sheridan Curry of Witmer street who has been confined to his bed the past week, is not improving very satisfactorily.

stified that he had moved to Uchile from Madras at Gill's request for the purpose of engaging in the illicit liquor business. He Bloom was to make the bootleg and Gill would help him dispose of it. The alleged partnership thus entered into worked alright for awhile, but according to Bloom the liabilities soon exceeded the assets for the reason that Chief Gill asserted the inalienable right of the "copper" to help himself out of the stock of the distillery without thought of pay and then "went south" with the proceeds received from the sale.

Following his testimony Bloom entered a plea of guilty to both the manufacture and sale of moonshine and appeared before Judge Chase this morning for sentence. With a brief reference to the law governing manufacture and sale of illicit liquor Judge Chase sentenced Bloom to pay $100 fine and costs and serve four months in the county jail, with not single day off for cash.

Thus the partners in crime are together once more "in hoc," but they do not drink from the same canteen nor do they speak as they pass by.

Louis Brandt, alias Rudolph Berndt, of Bradah, who was captured at Madras some time ago, with some liquor in his possession, also appeared before Judge Chase on his plea of guilty to possessing and transporting liquor, and as there was no evidence of sale, Brandt was given $100 fine and costs.

Start the Day with a Cooked Cereal and Milk

Oatmeal is one of the best of foods. It supplies sixteen needed bodily elements and when cooked with pasteurized milk instead of water and served as a morning cereal with rich, whole milk or cream, the two form an ideal food almost impossible to improve upon. The morning is not started right without a cooked cereal.

The ready-cooked breakfast foods lack the appetizing flavor which one gets in the home-cooked kinds. Then, too, the former are at least twice as expensive as the grains which need steaming, and when there are hungry children this is an item. The cereal which is allowed to simmer all night in the double-boiler on the back of the range—in pasteurized milk—is a breakfast in itself.

Oatmeal deserves to be the stand-by in every home, but there are others which may supplant it now and then for sake of variety.

TO F. W. GALBRAITH'S MEMORY

Memorial to Late American Legion National Commander is Dedicated at Cincinnati.

On the hills overlooking his home city, Cincinnati, stands a memorial to Frederick W. Galbraith, deceased national commander of the American Legion—killed in line of duty. This memorial takes the form of a parapet on which is a bronze tablet. Behind are the ashes of the former Legion head. It was erected by the veterans' organization and has become a national shrine for Legionnaires.

Galbraith was killed as he sped by automobile from Indianapolis, headquarters city, to Chicago, with Milton J. Foreman, past national commander, on their way to face a great problem for the veterans' organization. It was on such a mission fraught with good for his nation, that he met his end like the brave soldier he was.

The tomb was formally dedicated by National Commander John B. Quinn on the occasion of his first public appearance after his election. In his address, he characterized the departed leader as the "spirit of the American Legion." Commander Quinn declared that to Galbraith and to the myriad members of the Legion, the organization means the flesh and blood of America's fighting men, the soul of those who sleep on Flanders field and in the depths of the ocean, and the voice of four million who rallied to their country's flag when it was endangered.

The Legion leader said that the stimulation of the principles of Americanism, as sponsored by the beloved leader, Galbraith, could and would lead the organization to greater heights for the nation.

"The spirit of Americanism takes its beginning, the schools—and the Legion plans patriotic education," declared Commander Quinn. "It takes its place in the home—and the Legion hopes to carry an inspirational message to every freeman in America that patriotism may be better fostered there. The flaming light of Americanism is to be seen in the pupil, in the business world, and in the culmination of national life—so the Legion is ever ready to spread its broad gospel of better homes, stronger love of nation and deeper regard for law into the life of every inhabitant of America—to make all American citizens—not mere residents of a country."

"With the leadership of such consecrated patriots as Frederick W. Galbraith, we have assigned ourselves as guard about this sacred flame of civic spirit, we stand as sentinels about its temples," Commander Quinn said.

Seven foreign countries sent representatives to attend the ceremonies, including representatives of Italy, Japan, Great Britain, France, Spain, Greece and Brazil. The monument was unveiled by Michael Aaronson, a former sergeant-major who served under Galbraith overseas, and who was blinded while in service.

TO STRESS COMMUNITY LIFE

Indiana Legion Department Commander Urges Posts to Undertake Movements for Upbuilding.

"The American Legion will occupy its merited place in public esteem when the veterans become members not for the primary purpose of financial gain," declared E. Arthur Ball, department commander of the American Legion in Indiana, "for the advancement and protection of their rights as veterans, but for the means of more effectively performing their duties as citizens and the helpfulness they can be to their comrades."

Mr. Ball's statement was made in an address to Legionnaires of South Bend, La., dedicating the new Legion home in that city. Head of a great business institution in the state, Mr. Ball has given up his work to head the Legion in the Hoosier state for a year and expects to stress particularly the development of community life through the agency of Legion posts. In his address he said that the strength of the Legion is found on every hand, but that the influence of the organization was still further felt when posts undertook some worthwhile movement for the upbuilding of community life.

"KEEP OUT OF POLITICS"

Boston Editor Urges Legion Men to Fight for Disabled and to Scorn Politicians.

Declaring that the government had only done things for disabled men of the World War "under tush of the Legion," James T. Williams, editor of the Boston Transcript, told a gathering of veterans in Worcester, Mass., that the greatest problem of the Legion was the cure of the disabled men.

The speaker said that no group so sorely needed help of any organization as do the disabled men, particularly those suffering from tuberculosis, and advised his hearers to keep up work in relief of those men.

He told the Legion men that it was up to them to keep the organization free from politics as it has been in the past.

"The two great parties are cursed with men who say that the Legion is fair prey," said Mr. Williams. "They go up and down the state telling how easily the Legion can be handled. These statements are caused by resentment because they cannot get their contaminating claws on the Legion and control it," he concluded.

Very Likely.

A girl seldom has occasion to cry for help when a young man kisses her—probably because he is able to help himself.

THE RULES OF THE ORIGINAL KU KLUX KLAN

The secret rules and regulations of the original Ku Klux Klan during the days immediately following the Civil War are contained in an interesting little document, entitled "Prescript of the " presented to Dr. Wilbert B. Hinsdale of the University of Michigan by President James A. Garfield in 1871. Because of the recent activities of the later organization of the same name, this has become one of the most interesting curios in Dr. Hinsdale's collection. Dr. Hinsdale's copy is perhaps the only one still in existence.

Several differences between the nature of the organization in the days when it first came into existence and the present form, as well as many points of similarity, are shown by the document. Nowhere in it does the name Ku Klux Klan appear, although the titles of the officers in the organization are very similar to those in use today. Article II, which provides for these titles, reads as follows:

"The officers of this " shall consist of a Grand Wizard of the Empire and his Ten Genii; a Grand Dragon of the Realm and his Eight Hydras; a Grand Lion of the Dominion and his Six Furies; a Grand Giant of the Province and his Four Goblins; a Grand Cyclops of the Den and his Two Night-Hawks; a Grand Magi; a Grand Monk; a Grand Exchequer; a Grand Turk; a Grand Scribe; a Grand Sentinel and a Grand Ensign."

A Gift from President Garfield. Each page of the booklet, which was printed before 1867, is marked with a lithographic imprint to insure against forgery, and has a heading and a tail piece in Latin scraps, such as "Fiat Justitia," "O Tempora, Mores," "Cavendo Tutus," etc.

Dr. Hinsdale's copy was secured in 1871, when he was attending Hiram College, at Hiram, Ohio, and was rooming in the house of President (then Representative) Garfield. He had been appointed by his class to write a play, and appealed to his landlord for some information about the Ku Klux Klan on which to base his skit, as Mr. Garfield was at that time a member of the house committee engaged in investigating the activities of the Klan.

"We used considerable of the Ku Klux Klan tom-foolery in the play," said Dr. Hinsdale in relating the story. "It appeared to be a success. It ended with the student Ku Klux Klan actors nailing one of the members of the cast into a coffin so securely that we had to smash in the sides of the coffin after the audience had left to release him."

In the "creed" of the original Klan, members avowed that "We, the " reverently acknowledge the Supremacy of the Divine Being and recognize the Goodness and Providence of the same," while in the preamble it was stated that "we recognize our relations to the United States government and acknowledge the supremacy of its laws."

No one was permitted to become a member of the old organization without taking the following oath of obligation: "I, of my own free will and accord and in the presence of Almighty God, do solemnly swear or affirm that I will never reveal to anyone not a member of " any intimation, sign, symbol, word or act, or in any other manner whatever, any of the secrets, signs, grips, passwords, mysteries or purposes of " or that I am a member of the same, or that I know anyone who is a member, and that I will abide by the Prescript and Edicts of " so help me God."

The prescript ends with the words: "To the lovers of Law and Order, Peace and Justice, we send greeting; and to the shades of the venerated dead we affectionately dedicate the "

PRICES

There is some satisfaction in knowing that necessities of life which cost the average family $1,000 in 1920 can now be bought for $800. Though housing and fuel are higher than they were then, food, clothing, furniture and miscellaneous items have brought down the total.

Nineteen Twenty, however, was an abnormal year—the peak of the boom. When we come to compare present living costs with normal costs before the war, those of 1913 for example, we find that family necessities costing $1,000 then cost $1,720 now. That is, the cost of living is still 72 per cent above the pre-war level.

It may never return to that level. With all the ups and downs of prices, economic history over long periods shows a general tendency upward, usually attributed to the gold standard, on the principle that as the supply of gold in the world increases, the gold itself grows cheaper.

The war has had much to do with keeping prices up, in this case. The diminished supply of goods in the world and the productive capacity of nations have not yet been renewed. There is no good reason, though, for believing that the price level is destined to stay as high as it is. Better production and distribution—everybody working a little harder and more intelligently—would bring prices down.

TAX-REDUCTION FIRST

When Congress assembled in December, it was disposed to postpone tax-reduction and give precedence to the army bonus and certain other measures involving large expenditures. Since the holidays that plan has been changed, and taxation is given first place on the program.

This is the wise thing to do. Revenue measures logically come first, because money has to be raised before it can be spent and there is no knowing how much there is going to be to spend until the system of taxation is established. Also, the public is far more interested in tax-reduction than in anything else before Congress, and would have no patience with any program that deferred action on that question.

The law-makers' vacation has been good for them, giving them a clearer idea of what the country wants. They know now that collectively and individually, they are likely to stand or fall on the tax issue, and that the sooner they report and pass a satisfactory revenue bill the better it will be for their own fortunes.

SCHOOL POSTURES

One of the reasons why physical education in the public school is an essential, and not a frill, is pointed out by an eminent physician. School attendance, he says, without physical direction develops many bodily faults. Round shoulders, bad posture, curved lines, flabby muscles, scrawny figures, etc., troubles, and stomach, kidney and intestinal disturbances are all partially induced by wrong posture at desks or in standing by shallow breathing, by wrong physical habits. They are all largely counteracted by knowledge and practice of physical health and hygiene rules.

In every school, the doctor believes, physical education

AN ARTIST'S QUEST

By FLORENCE DAVIES

Robert Henri, one of the greatest living American painters has just written a book in which he tells us something about his art.

What he says about the sort of people he likes to paint might well set us thinking.

He isn't one of those painters who has discovered just one picture that he knows how to paint and then paints it over and over again with variations. But he does most often paint people. They are people of widely different types, and yet in a way of the same type.

He finds them in Mexico, in Ireland in the desert. Some times it's a little laughing picaninny, or it may be Tony the son of the Italian fruit vender, or a beautiful girl, or an old lady. But always it must express a kind of dignity.

"But how can a little Italian boy, not old enough to know what the word means, have dignity?" one asks.

Of course it isn't that kind of dignity. It isn't the kind that takes itself seriously and walks with a strut; the kind that is afraid that it will be lost if it breathes a little too hard—that is, the thing of all others that Henri wouldn't paint if he could help it. That is just a pose. And that is exactly what the artist hates.

By dignity he means a kind of sincerity. Whenever he finds people who belong to their environment who are just themselves in the place where they are, untrammelled and unconscious, they have a certain inward dignity.

And all of Henri's people seem to have that kind of unconscious joy in being just exactly what they are. He never yet, for instance, painted any one, whether little Indian boy, or son of New York's East Side, who looked as if he were posing for a picture, or posing for anything, for that matter.

"Art," says Henri, "is wherever life exists and expresses dignity, humor, humanity, kindness, order."

I'm afraid then that the bluffers and the four-flushers wouldn't stand much chance of having this artist paint them. He is looking for greatness. Yet he doesn't seek out college presidents and diplomats, judges of the supreme court, or the great of the business world and the stage. No, he takes a little unconscious Mexican lad, or a gypsy. Why? Because the greatness he is looking for is the greatness of sincerity, the greatness that comes from being the best of just what you are, of fitting your place in life perfectly of being supremely true to type.

It's a greatness that puts sham and pretense, make-believe and bluff, the empty strivings of the climber, beneath the efforts of the artist.

Farley Declares Lawyers Deliberately Selected British Ship For Trip

Washington, Jan. 14 (INS).—The American Bar Association deliberately selected a British ship for its trip to London this summer although the United States Shipping Board offered to meet every condition given by its foreign competitor, Chairman Edward T. Farley, of the Shipping Board, reported today to the Senate in reply to a Senate resolution.

Farley declared the Shipping Board laced the Leviathan American "Mississippi of the Seas" at the Bar Association's convenience and offered to cut its rates to meet the British offer but that the law organization picked a British vessel regardless.

PEACE AND THRIFT

The anniversary of Benjamin Franklin's birth, January 17, has come to be observed as the principal day of an annual "Thrift Week" during which the nation's attention is called to matters of private and public economy.

Benjamin Franklin is one of our national heroes worthy of a great deal of study. Kites and keys and lightning rods and wise sayings compose the average school child's knowledge of Franklin's usefulness. That he was one of the greatest diplomats this country has ever had is less common knowledge. Important as was his part in our War of Independence he was deeply interested in promoting peace. In 1792, when living in Paris, Franklin printed a pamphlet entitled "Conciliation of the Nations of Europe, or a Project for Perpetual Peace."

Consideration of this fact suggests the thought that perpetual peace and thrift are not at all unrelated subjects. Disarmament, such as has already been undertaken, with regard to certain types of battleships, represents a very practical sort of thrift—and peace promotion—which the nations would do well to study further and expand to include the army and air services.

Correct Diagnosis First Need Says "Cal" Of Agricultural Ills

Chicago, Jan. 14 (INS).—A correct diagnosis is the first preliminary toward remedying the plight of the American farmer, President Coolidge wrote to the farmer-manufacturer association's national convention which opened today in Chicago. That diagnosis has been found in cooperation between farmer and manufacturer, President Coolidge added.

In expressing regret at being unable to attend the two-day meeting, which every state is represented, the President wrote:

"The plight of the farmers in recent years has been and will continue to be a means of relieving agriculture, a menace to the prosperity of every other element in the community."

TRADE-RECORD
WE LIGHT THE WORLD

American electric lighting supplies go to 100 countries and colonies in every part of the globe. Our exports of "incandescent lamps" in the last decade number more than 100,000,000.

The United States is lighting the world. Its electric lights twinkle in a hundred different countries, colonies, protectorates, mandated territories and island communities, literally the world over. To Iceland at the far north, to the southernmost communities of Africa, South America and Oceania and to all the countries and colonies lying between those extremes the manufacturers of the United States are sending millions of dollars worth of electrical lighting appliances. It was only in 1913, says the Trade Record of the National City Bank of New York, that the exportation of electric lighting apparatus was deemed of sufficient importance to warrant mention in the export records of the country, and in that year the number of "incandescent lamps" exported was less than 3,000,000 with a value of a half million dollars, yet the total number of lamps exported from the beginning of 1913 to the end of 1923 is more than 100,000,000 and their value, in round terms, $25,000,000.

Where do they go, these 100,000,000 American incandescent lamps? Literally to every part of the world, for the one hundred countries, colonies, protectorates, mandated territories and islands to which they have been sent include practically every political division or community the world over. To Europe alone the list of countries to which they were sent in the latest year for which details are available was 26, to North America other than the United States 25, to South America every one of the 13 countries and colonies, to Asia 16, to Africa a dozen, and to Oceania a half dozen specified areas, to say nothing of the many smaller islands included in the general group "all other Oceania."

And it appears that the American incandescent lamp finds favor even in the most advanced of the great manufacturing countries, for in 1920 the number of "metal filament" lamps alone sent to England was 507,000, to Belgium 746,000, to Italy 330,000, and to Europe as a whole approximately 2 1/2 million. Canada which buys freely of all of our manufactures took in 1920 nearly 4,000,000 incandescent lamps, 1921 at 2,470,000 with a total value of $59,728,398, against approximately 1913 to the end of 1923 is

Argentina 1 1/2 million, while the number taken by Australia in 1921 aggregated considerably over a million. And this use of electric lights by no means is confined to the larger or more advanced countries, for Iceland and the Faroe Islands took in 1912 over 12,000 lamps; Hejaz, Arabia in 1921 over 3,000; Palestine approximately 2,000, and our own Virgin Islands over 4,000.

This growing use of electric lights the world over illustrates, says the Trade Record, the tremendous development in the utilization of electricity in all the many forms in which it is now made useful to man. This growing world demand for electrical appliances and machinery is evidenced by the fact that our exports of the group officially designated as "electrical machinery and appliances" has aggregated about $650,000,000 in the last dozen years, and the distribution has been in absolutely worldwide. The capital of the factories producing electrical machinery, apparatus and supplies is reported by the census as $857,855,000 in 1919 against $83,660,000 in 1899, or ten times as much in 1919 as 20 years earlier. The latest census report shows the total number of incandescent lamps manufactured in the United States in 1921 at 247,000,000 with a total value of $59,728,398, against approximately 1913 to the end of 1923 is

SUIT BROUGHT FOR $13,762.45

Livestock & Chase, on behalf of the Hileman Coal Company, began a suit in Prothonotary-Casson's office this morning against H. L. Swope, Chas. S. Saff and Reuben Hegarty, trading as the Phoenix Coal Company, in an effort to recover the sum of $13,762.45. The plaintiffs allege is due them for coal wrongfully removed from land under lease by them. The coal used for it is alleged was taken from three tracts under lease by the Hileman Company from Elizabeth S. Lewis and Clara Hileman and located in Bigler township. The statement filed with the notice of suit alleges that not only did the defendant company not only break into their mine and remove the coal wrongfully but they removed pillars and caved the workings so that the rightful owners could not get their coal out.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE AWKWARD AGE

"Cackle, cackle," said young Miss Hen. "I feel sorry for children when they become a certain age."

"Why not?" inquired Red Top, the rooster, "pray tell me why so, young Miss Hen, cackle-a-doodle-do, it would be interesting to know why you feel sorry for children."

"When they become a certain age," said young Miss Hen.

"Well, then, when they become a certain age," Red Top repeated. "I'd like to know why you feel sorry for them at such a time or why you have felt sorry for them, or why you will feel sorry for them—if you are going to keep on feeling sorry for them."

"And then, too, I'd be interested in hearing what age children must reach in order to have you feel sorry for them."

"Do you suppose they are thankful and pleased that you feel sorry for them at that age? Are they in need of sympathy then?"

"Well," said young Miss Hen, "I will answer all your questions. First of all I feel sorry for children when they reach a certain age because I understand them. In other words I have a fellow feeling for them."

"I don't see," said Red Top, "how a young hen can have a fellow feeling for a lot of children."

"I mean," said young Miss Hen, "that I understand how they feel because I too have had the same feelings."

"Little children are always so much admired. They are thought so cunning and if they're naughty they seem to be very quickly forgiven and they're hugged and loved and made great pets of and everyone thinks they're so sweet and pretty and dear and lovable."

"Then they become a little older. If they're bad they're scolded good and hard. They're not thought nearly so cunning and they're not thought nearly so sweet, nor so lovable, nor so dear, nor are they smiled at almost at all times."

"Sometimes it is said they have reached the awkward age. I do not know what age it is or just when it comes but it is the age between being a little child and a big boy or girl."

"It comes at different times, or at different ages, not always at the same time with everyone. I do not know whether children are thankful and pleased that I have so much sympathy for them at such times or not, but I have at any rate. And the reason for it is this. Yes, this is the reason why I so thoroughly understand, and I know how they feel when they're not admired as they have been and I know how it makes them feel only more awkward. You see when I was a little chick I was a dear, plump, fuzzy, running little thing."

"I had soft yellow down and I was really quite sweet. I realize it now that it has gone from me. Then I became older. I couldn't help it. It was not my fault. And I grew. My shape was awkward and I moved awkwardly. If I humped into anything or ran in a silly way I was called silly, but if I had done the same thing as a little chick I would have been thought a poor, dear, frightened little chicken."

"And as I became older I became more and more awkward and more and more I realized that people thought of me as being a pretty unattractive hen."

"Then I heard some people talking about some children who had grown from babyhood into boyhood and girlhood. They said these children had been so cunning when they had been little but that now they were at the awkward age."

"And I've seen so much of it since—unappreciated children because they're not little and cunning. And it's the same way with hens! The very same way. Ah, it is a great shame!"

"Hens are awkward, too, before they become older, settled hens. They understand how children feel. Ah yes, young hens are sympathetic. They know what it is like to use their dear little chick ways and looks and to be thought so much less attractive and not loved in the same indulgent, affectionate way."

"Now I understand," said Red Top, "and I don't wonder you have a fellow feeling," as you call it, for children."

Correct.

Curwensville's Own Column

Mrs. Maud Daugherty, of Philadelphia was called to Curwensville last week owing to the serious illness of her sister, Mrs. Joseph L. Dale. She and Mrs. Dale are the only survivors of the large family of Jacob Cole.

Mrs. Harry Bilger returned from Philadelphia Friday evening, where she had gone to see her husband, Harry Bilger, who suffered an operation for the removal of one of his eyes. He passed the ordeal successfully and will be able to return to his home during the latter part of this week.

Revival services commenced in the Methodist Church Sunday evening and will be continued for an indefinite period.

The new foot bridge across Anderson Creek is now ready for placement just as soon as the water recedes sufficiently for putting down the spans. The people on the south side of the creek have been put to considerable inconvenience by the washout in getting over to this side of town, especially the school children who have been compelled to go around quite a distance in order to get to the several school buildings. The new foot bridge is being planted on a more solid foundation than the first one was, and it is not likely that high water or lumbering of ice against it will remove it as easily as the first one.

The square dance held in the Red Lion on Saturday night was a grand success. The square dance was a grand success. The square dance was a grand success.

The numerous and rapid changes of the weather within the week past has caused a great deal of sickness in this county and every town physician is constantly on the go, both day and night. Severe lung colds and pneumonia seem to be the leaders in most of the afflicted ones. Rain one day, warm the next and cold and snow the third day seems to be playing the very devil with people who seldom before in their lives have had an ache or bodily pain. The death rate in this community for the month of December and thus far in January has far exceeded that for the same length of time during last year.

Miss Ellen Sykes, of Sykesville, Pa., was a visitor at the home of R. G. Bilger, Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Mary Jane Askey Norris, widow of Thomas S. Norris, who died during the spring of 1889, celebrated her 84th birthday at her old home, located between New Millport and Kermoor and now owned by her son, B. W. Norris, on last Saturday, January 12th.

Her husband, Thomas S. Norris, lumbered during his early days on Montgomery Creek for a number of years, giving the old Norris camp at the head of Montgomery its name. In 1874 he purchased the William McCracken farm as above located and lived there until his death of pneumonia in 1889.

Mrs. Norris has lived on the old farm ever since, having complete charge of the farming until about 20 years ago when her son B. W. Norris bought the place, but Mrs. Norris retained her home with him. Mrs. Norris is the mother of 14 children, four of whom died in infancy. Miss Mrs. Alfred Erhard, died at the Wright place, between Curwensville and Clearfield, Nov. 23, 1880, and Miss Minnie died at the age of 16 in 1893, Feb. 27th. This leaves eight children still living. All were present at the commemoration of Mrs. Norris' birthday except Laura, who is in Eureka Calif., Nora, Mrs. J. F. Sohl, coming all the way from Livingston, Montana, to be present. The living children in order of their age are as follows: Nora, Mrs. J. F. Sohl; Perry A., of New Millport; Mrs. Joe Fricke, Eureka, Calif.; Wade A., of New Millport; Grant, of Curwensville; Ella, Mrs. G. M. DeHaas, of Philadelphia; Blake W., now on the old homestead; May, Mrs. George L. Thurston, of Clearfield. Besides the above children the following neighbors, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, and wives were present: Mrs. Perry Norris, Mrs. Wade A. Norris, Mrs. Grant Norris, Mrs. Blake W. Norris, Mr. George I. Thurston; grandchildren, Mrs. Erma (Eldon) Bell, Mrs. Marie (Lemoyne) Hile, Miss Delta Norris, great-grandchildren, Miss Gertrude Bell; neighbors, Mrs. Isaac Wolf, Mrs. Ward Shamp, Miss Rachael Shamp, 21 in all.

Mrs. Norris is in fairly good health and enjoyed the big turkey dinner equally with her children and friends. Some years ago she made a visit to her daughters, Nora, in Livingston and Laura, in California, and her ambition ever since is to make a second visit in the far west, and as she says "do a little homesteading out there." She is bright and alert and most entertaining on the early lumbering history of Clearfield county. May be spared to enjoy many more such birthdays.

Bald Eagle Valley Man Is Placed In Jail On A Charge of Burning House To Obtain His Insurance

John Marks, for many years a resident of upper Bald Eagle valley was placed in the Bellefonte jail a few days ago on a charge of arson. He was taken into custody near Altoona. State police are gathering evidence against Marks as they continue their investigation of another serious affair, according to Justice J. M. Keichline, of Bellefonte, before whom information of the charge of arson was made by the state police.

The arson charge grows out of a fire which recently destroyed buildings on Mr. Marks' property which were amply covered by insurance. A policy of $2,600 on the property had been taken out at Tyrone by Mr. Marks, and the insurance committee had the investigation made before considering payment as the explanation of the cause of the fire was not satisfactory.

A DISASTROUS FIRE NEAR PORT MATILDA

The big dwelling on the hill to the right of the town of Port Matilda, known as "The Bigelow House" burned to the ground on Tuesday night, January 8th. It is said the small children piled a lot of straw on the back porch and then set it on fire. Becoming frightened they ran for help. The father was away working and the mother was at a neighbor's home, where there was sickness. Before the fire fighters arrived, the building was a mass of flames and was soon reduced to ashes.

Neckties were invented so that the women would have something to buy for a man's Christmas gift.

A man may not know what he wants for Christmas, but a woman has no such problem to perplex her.

Williamsport Woman Admitted To Practice Before Supreme Court

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 14 (INS.)—Mrs. Louis C. Chatham of Williamsport, Pa., was one of the two women lawyers admitted to practice here today in the supreme court. She is 58 years old.

The other woman is Miss Felice Darkow, of this city. Mrs. Chatham studied law at Harvard after sending her two sons through the Boston Institute of technology.

A Case of Adornment

A lady loves her jewel case, for treasures it contains; rings, earrings to adorn the face, tiaras, lockets, chains; and a bracelet watch to fit the wrist, necklaces, strings of pearls, a diamond brooch or amethyst, unfit for younger girls. But what's the jewels be, their value, it is clear, is great, as readers will agree if they have bought them here.

Why be Feeble?

ADVANCING years should not mean the approach of a period of decay and weakness and cause of worry, care and trouble. Don't dread the days ahead! Be prepared to grapple with the battle men of Old Age—with rheumatism, with undermined health—with feebleness. The S. S. S. that is free from impurities—through which a rich red blood tingles—need not worry about advancing years. End at the aid of S. S. S.—the builder of red blood cells—to fight off the intruders of Old Age.

With the aid of S. S. S. when you reach this stage of life the nerve power that has been built up by ever increasing blood cells—the vim and vigor of youth that you possess will capably enable you to enjoy the advantages of pure vegetable ingredients and is sold at all good drug stores. The large size bottle is the more economical.

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRDING KING

BRASS FOR RHEUMATISM

THAT wearing a brass ring on the finger will cure rheumatism is a common superstition in nearly all parts of the country; and in the South there is a belief among the colored population that wearing brass rings in the ears will ward off the same disease. In some sections it is believed that the wearing of a brass ring is not only good for rheumatism but will prevent cramps.

Brass and bronze are both alloys of copper and both metals were included in the word "orichalcum" even down to the Middle Ages; though Strabo calls brass orichalcum specifically and describes its manufacture. To the ancients brass was but another form of bronze. The Bronze age preceded the Iron age. It was an era when, though iron was known, there were a few iron weapons even at the siege of Troy—bronze was the metal in common use for weapons and purposes of general utility.

When iron came into its own conservative people looked upon the new fangled metal with suspicion and retained bronze for all purposes into which entered the worship of the gods or the performance of sacred rites. Roman and Sabine priests might not be shaved with iron razors but only with razors of bronze, and with bronze shears they had to have their hair cut. The Greeks attributed a certain cleansing virtue to bronze and hence employed it in expiatory rites. There was evidently some connection conceived to exist between bronze and its cousin, German brass, and the sun. For bronze was used in the ceremonies with which the Greeks greeted an eclipse of the sun and the Latin word orichalcum, derived from a Greek word meaning mountain copper and supposedly generally to signify brass, became soon corrupted into aurichalcum, that is, copper simulating gold the color of the sun. In short, brass is a mystic metal from the Age of Bronze, believed through long centuries to possess special virtues and ought, certainly to be equal to a case of ordinary rheumatism.

BURSON AUTHOR OF A NEW BONUS BILL OFFERED IN HOUSE

Designed To Adjust
Compensation, Would
Cost About Half of the
Other Plan, He Says.

PLAN IS EXPLAINED

By BENNETH CLARK
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

Washington, Jan. 14.—A brand new revised bonus bill made its appearance in Congress today, irrespective of the plans of Administration leaders to jam tax reduction legislation through ahead of any bonus legislation.

The new measure, differing materially from any of those heretofore offered, was authored by Senator Burson, Republican of New Mexico, a so-called "regular." It would cost the Government approximately $1,400,000,000, or about two billion dollars less than the estimated cost of the bill voted by the late President Harding which has been re-introduced in the House this session.

Fundamentally Burson's bill is designed to adjust compensation of veterans to equalize payments to those who stayed at home to work in the industries.

SENATOR NORRIS INTRODUCES FIRST OF RAIL OWNERSHIP BILLS IN SENATE

Plan Calls For Creation
of Two Great Across
Continent Trunk Lines
Under Federal Control.

IT HAS NO CHANCE

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

Washington, Jan. 14.—The Progressive insurgents today exploded a bombshell in Congress in the form of a proposal for government ownership of railroads.

Creation of a gigantic government corporation to operate two trans-continental trunk lines criss-crossing the nation from the Atlantic to Pacific and from Canada to the Gulf, was proposed by Senator George W. Norris, Republican of Nebraska, progressive leader, in a bill he introduced in the Senate.

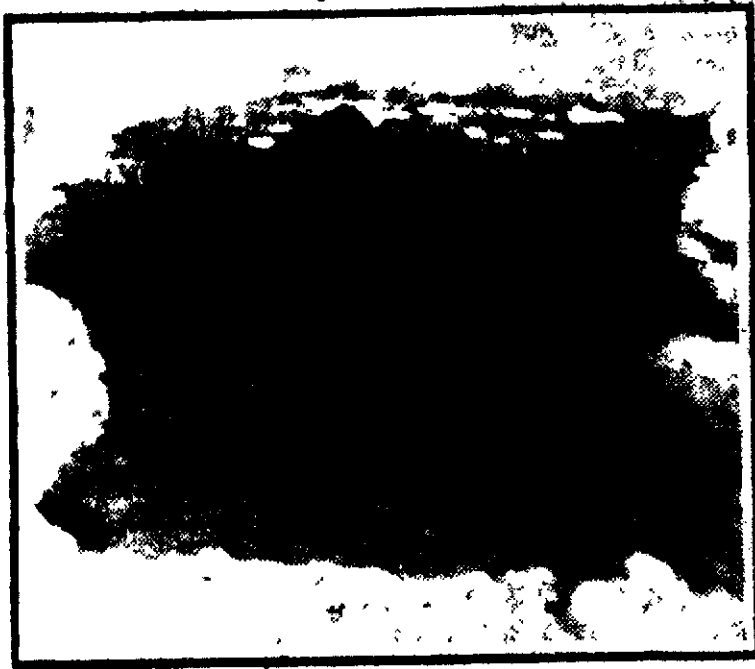

The corporation would be given a maximum capitalization of $5,000,000,000 and power to condemn, purchase or lease such privately owned railroad as found necessary to create the two federal trunk lines. It would also have power to acquire and operate power plants and coal mines necessary to supply fuel.

A five-man directorship, each receiving $12,000 annual salary, would be formed to control the corporation. They would be appointed by the President on the same conditions affecting cabinet officers and ambassadors, "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate." These five men would have sole handling of the corporation's finances, operation and management and severe penalties would be laid out for misdeeds.

So that the corporation could control export shipments, the bill would turn over to it all government-owned ships, whether in ocean service or used in rivers or lakes. This authorization incidentally would wipe out the United States Shipping Board and the Navy's Fleet Corporation.

Although a majority of the Senate insurgents support the bill they held small hope for its enactment.

By FRANK M. MASON

Paris, Jan. 14.—The inter-allied committee of experts summoned by the allied reparations commission to examine Germany's capacity for reparations payments held its first meeting today under the presidency of Charles G. Dawes, of Chicago, who demanded a common sense agreement.

The committee met at 11 o'clock. "We are practical men, free from all political prejudice," declared Dawes. "I hope this inquiry will be conducted along the lines indicated by common sense. The success of this committee depends on whether the allies there is adequate conception of the great disaster which faces each allied nation unless common sense is crowned king."

"For the moment we are less concerned with Germany's present capacity for payment than this committee's present capacity for courage to act."

The committee will examine means of balancing the German budget. It is likely that sessions of the committee will be held in Berlin and other German cities as well as Paris.

Dawes continued: "I have read with shame and humiliation the outpouring of American nationalistic demagogues who undertake to lecture Europe in order to lift themselves to some petty office or to maintain political popularity. 'We have found an impenetrable, colossal fog band in economic opinion, based upon premises of fact which has changed, making the bulk of the premises worthless.'"

KELLOGG ESCHEWS KNICKERBOCKERS FOR 'SOUP AND FISH'

By DAVID M. CHURCH
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
Ambassador Kellogg, unlike his predecessor, George Harvey, eschewed knickerbockers. He and his staff appeared in full evening dress.

Major General Handley Williams, marshal of the diplomatic corps called at the Claridge hotel for Ambassador Kellogg attired in a brilliant uniform of scarlet with cape and tunic. Numerous medals blazed upon his breast.

There were three royal coaches with prancing black horses and postillion riders. The royal footmen wore uniforms of gold and scarlet with cocked hats.

The procession from the Claridge to the palace was Cinderella-like in its pageantry.

After the official business a reception was held at the palace. Ambassador and Mrs. Kellogg were invited to lunch with King George and Queen Mary.

Don Mahaffey, one of Mahaffey's bustling business men, transacted business here on Saturday.

JUDGE CHASE PUTS A SHIVER IN SPINE OF BOOTLEGGER BY SAYING '4 MONTHS'

Clearfield county is going to be "the enemy's country" for all moonshiners and bootleggers during the term of Hon. A. R. Chase as President Judge of the courts of the county, judging from the way in which Judge Chase measured out even-handed justice to the first illegal liquor manufacturer and purveyor to face him for sentence.

At December term of criminal court Barney Gill, Chief of Police of Clearfield, was convicted of violation of the liquor law and sentenced by Judge Bell to pay a fine of $100 and costs and to serve eight months in jail, with the provision that he might apply for a parole at the end of 4 months upon payment of the fine and costs in the case.

The principal witness against Gill was one Josh Bloom, of Madera, who

MAGNUS JOHNSON THINKS PEPPER LIVES IN ALLEY

When Senator Magnus Johnson, of Philadelphia, last week addressed a group of bankers, he was the guest of Senator Pepper. At the conclusion of his address, Senator Johnson started out with Senator Pepper for life latter's home.

"Well, Senator, I guess you live in a palace," Johnson said to his host. "I don't know how to behave in one of those palaces. What shall I do?"

"Just wait a minute," Johnson said. "I'll show you."

Then Pepper led his guest up the narrow passageway that is Panama street and pointed to his "palace," a modest three-story building recently renovated to resemble a quaint English country home.

"Senator, you live in an alley," Senator Johnson gasped.

Mine Fire Endangers All Buildings of The University of Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14. (INS.)—The buildings of the University of Pittsburgh here were threatened with destruction today when a fire, which has been raging more than two weeks in an abandoned mine underlying the campus, broke through the surface emitting large volumes of smoke and flame like a miniature volcano. Experts at the U. S. Bureau of Mines here were summoned to aid in checking the fire which it is feared may spread through the entire workings which underlie virtually the entire campus.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Wilson spent the week-end in Pittsburgh with Mr. and Mrs. Janssen. They were present at the christening of Alexander Patton Janssen, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Janssen.

Mrs. F. G. Betts has returned from Greensburg where she visited her sister, Mrs. March.

MIMIC "WAR" ON PANAMA CANAL IS OFFICIALLY DECLARED TODAY AND SHIPS SWING INTO BATTLE ARRAY

On Heard U. S. S. Quibria, Panama Canal Zone, by radio—Jan. 14—Mimic "war" was officially declared today to that the defenses of the Panama Canal against the great armada of American warships that are engaged in maneuvers.

It was explained that the first "battle" would take place at Colon, or try to land an expeditionary force of marines.

The "Blackfleet" representing the enemy was expected to clash with the Panama naval district force guarding the eastern entrance to the canal.

The "Blackfleet" which is superior in strength is expected to sink the Panama Naval forces. The next move of the Blackfleet is problematical. It may boldly attack the harbor or try to land an expeditionary force of marines.

BUT LITTLE BIT OF T.B. FOUND IN CATTLE OF JEFFERSON COUNTY

Pennsylv., Jan. 14.—As a result of the first day's tuberculosis tests of cattle in five townships Jefferson County may come under the modified plan, which means that the county will not be subject to the testing of cattle for three year periods. If the rest of the county shows the less than 1-2 of 1 per cent of reactors shown in the first reports.

Reports made to J. P. Winslow, county agent, by 22 veterinarians of the county show that out of 2,000 cattle tested only 13 were re-actors. The townships in which these tests were made include Rose, Warsaw, Washington, Pinecreek and Bell. All of the tests were made last Monday, and farmers, with the exception of McCalmont and Beaver, co-operated well. In these two townships a misunderstanding and some adverse propaganda made cattle owners a trifle obstreperous.

If the tests to be held from now until the end of next week are as favorable as the first ones Jefferson county may be the first county in Pennsylvania to come under the modified plan and one of the few in the United States. It is a distinct honor to farmers and cattle owners of this section of the State.

The next townships to come under the tests will be Union and Gaskill. Bell, tested Monday, showed but one reactor.

QUIET SUNDAY IS ENJOYED BY PEOPLE OF PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia, Jan. 14. (INS.)—The first week of General Smedley D. Butler's whirlwind drive against vice here resulted in 484 raids on saloons, speakeasies, gambling and disorderly houses.

The number of week-end arrests for drunkenness dropped 14 per cent as a result of the campaign. There were no spectacular acts of banditry during the last few days. It was the first week end period in many months that Philadelphia has not enjoyed at least one daylight payroll robbery.

Some saloons were reported "open" today but not selling liquor.

Gen. Butler took a rest yesterday at his temporary home in Overbrook. Today he will go to Quantico, Va., for a few hours on Marine business. He will return within a short time to Philadelphia. Police activity, however, will not cease because of his absence, he announced.

THE "Y" WILL HAVE A REPRESENTATIVE BASKETBALL TEAM

Announcement was made at the "Y" this morning that a varsity team would be formed to represent the local Association on the basketball court this winter. The Physical Department Committee have decided to put a representative Y team in the field and to give Clearfield fans the best type of basketball which the Association can produce. There is no doubt but that a fast aggregation can be picked for there are many good players in the city which are not connected with any team and which would be anxious to get lined up in their favorite sport. Tryouts are to be held in the gymnasium tomorrow night at 8:15, open to any local player. A good number have already expressed their desire of coming out. James Mitchell Jr., chairman of the basketball Committee and Physical Director Shannon will look them over and take charge of the team.

It has not been decided on which night of the week games will be played but the schedule will be arranged so as not to conflict with any other local games. There are many close Associations and Independent teams which will be gotten in touch with immediately and no doubt a fast schedule can be lined up.

And There Were No Casualties

Young McDonald of Albany from a blow over the heart from "Toddy" Mick, also of Albany, in 1917 that the last boxing law was repealed and it is feared that an investigation of the present circumstances will not help the sport.

According to some accounts, Jerome should not have been allowed to enter the ring Friday night. His personal friends, endeavoring to account for his knockout at the hands of Taylor in the twelfth round, declared that he had been suffering from a severe attack of indigestion since 3 o'clock that afternoon and had eaten no supper. The official physician, appointed by the boxing commission to Madison Square Garden bouts to examine all fighters before entering the ring, gave Jerome a clean bill of health, it is assumed.

The fighter took a severe beating from Taylor but by no means a necessarily fatal one. In fact he had rallied in the eighth, ninth and tenth rounds and was carrying the fight to Taylor when he was knocked down with a right hand punch to the jaw. He arose to his feet, groggy at the count of nine, but the bell rang, ending the round, before Taylor could strike another blow.

Jerome could barely reach his corner to gain the minute's respite between rounds, yet he was sent reeling out by his seconds only to collapse under a fusillade of blows. Most of them landed on his shoulders and back, Jerome retaining the fighter's instinct to cover up.

Clutching the ropes, he pulled himself to his feet at the count of nine and reeled toward his antagonist. The referee, Jack O'Sullivan, intervened and stopped the bout. Jerome was carried to his corner unconscious, and first aid methods failed to rouse him. He was carried to his dressing room and failing to respond to treatment there, was taken to Bellevue hospital.

There his case was diagnosed as "physical overtaxation and exhaustion" and it was believed that a few days' confinement at the institution would result in his recovering his strength and health.

Jerome's real name was Frank Doherty, suffered a cerebral hemorrhage late Saturday night and his condition steadily becoming worse as an unsuccessful operation was performed by Dr. John Stewart, brain specialist. Jerome did not recover consciousness after the operation and died at 1:30 o'clock. His mother, his wife and Billy Gibson, his former manager, were with the fighter at the end.

An autopsy will be performed this morning to determine the exact cause of death.

No arrests have been made up to the present. Taylor and his manager, Eddie Kane, left for the west on Saturday morning, having been assured that Jerome was all right.

Just what action may be taken by the New York State Athletic Commission is one of the developments that remain to be cleared up today. Wm. McCormick, chairman of the license commission and tacit head of the commission, could not be reached for a statement but it is likely that a special meeting of the commission will be called to consider the case.

Tex Rickard, in whose arena the fatal fight was held, deplored the death of the boxer, after calling personally upon Mrs. Doherty to condole with her. Rickard said that it was the first fight held under his auspices in which a fighter had been seriously injured.

New York, Jan. 14. (INS.)—Concussion of the brain and rupture of a small vein in the brain caused the death of Frankie Jerome, New York boxer who died as a result of injuries received Friday night in a boxing bout with Bud Taylor, Terre Haute, Indiana.

This conclusion was reached today by Dr. Charles Norris, chief medical examiner, who performed an autopsy. "There was no evidence that Jerome was in poor physical condition," Norris said, "although that would not necessarily be brought out by an autopsy."

It would provide four chief pay items to veterans:

1. A refund of enforcement allotments ranging from $5 to $15 a month deducted from the pay of the soldier, applying to about 50 percent of the veterans.

2. A refund amounting to $8 a month on account of premiums paid for insurance while in the service applying to practically all of the veterans.

3. Indemnity for the veteran caused on account of losses by the purchases of subscriptions of liberty bonds while in the service at the rate of $10 for each $50 not exceeding $20 in the aggregate.

4. Payment to the veterans of $2 a month for each month in the service to equalize similar payment made to civil employees earning less than $2500 during the war.

The payment would be made in cash over a period of four years, one fourth of the number of veterans to be paid each year in full, four and one half per cent interest to be paid on all deferred payments.

The veterans further would be given the option of taking cash or paid up life insurance on the basis of $400 of insurance for each $100 of cash due the soldier, payable at death, or may be surrendered after twenty years for cash value, based upon the annual premiums plus four per cent American Mortality Actuary tables. The Government would be required to pay the annual premiums and to invest such premiums in approved securities.

Bursum estimated that 75 per cent of the veterans would choose life insurance policies and upon this basis the cost to the Government would be approximately $125,000,000 each year for the first four years and thereafter approximately $60,000,000 annually for the succeeding sixteen years.

Bursum declared he would demand early action by the Senate.

their friends were curious, but not enthusiastic and nowhere was there any indication of alarm, on the part of those who are laboring in behalf of William G. McAdoo, Oscar Underwood and the half dozen other potential candidates whose names figure in Democratic speculation.

"Who is he?" and "What is behind it?" were two questions that almost invariably met the inquirer.

That so astute a politician as the commoner would not lead a dash from the table without having some purpose in mind was generally accepted among the Democrats here. And lacking any details of Colonel Bryan's plans, the consensus of opinion appeared to be that Bryan intended placing Dr. Murphy in the Florida primaries as a favorite son in order to prevent either the McAdoo or Underwood from gaining control of the Florida delegation.

Bryan's attitude toward the so-called major Democratic candidates, McAdoo, Underwood, Oak, Ralston and Davis, has not been clearly defined, except in the case of Underwood, whom the colonel strongly opposes. The McAdoo people have privately declared that when the time comes Bryan will be found in their camp, but Bryan himself has not confirmed this.

topsy. I believe however that he was too finely trained."

Claims of friends of Jerome that he had been ill and had not eaten before the bout were not borne out at the autopsy, Norris said.

"However, one cannot say whether these claims are true as the boxer was stricken Friday and did not die until Sunday," he said.

Sheridan Curry of Witmer street who has been confined to his bed the past week, is not improving very satisfactorily.

stified that he had moved to Uchile from Madonia at Gill's request for the purpose of engaging in the illicit liquor business. He Bloom was to make the bootleg and Gill would help him dispose of it. The alleged partnership thus entered into worked alright for awhile, but according to Bloom the liabilities soon exceeded the assets for the reason that Chief Gill asserted the inalienable right of the "copper" to help himself out of the stock of the distillery without thought of pay and then "went south" with the proceeds received from the sale.

Following his testimony Bloom entered a plea of guilty to both the manufacture and sale of moonshine and appeared before Judge Chase this morning for sentence. With a brief reference to the law governing manufacture and sale of illicit liquor Judge Chase sentenced Bloom to pay $100 fine and costs and serve four months in the county jail, with not single day off for cash.

Thus the partners in crime are together once more "in hoc," but they do not drink from the same canteen nor do they speak as they pass by.

Louis Brandt, alias Rudolph Berndt, of Bradah, who was captured at Madonia some time ago, with some liquor in his possession, also appeared before Judge Chase on his plea of guilty to possessing and transporting liquor, and as there was no evidence of sale, Brandt was given $100 fine and costs.

About 9 o'clock Flint consumed the contents of two of the bottles and went to bed. Start the Day with a Cooked Cereal and Milk

Oatmeal is one of the best of foods. It supplies sixteen needed bodily elements and when cooked with pasteurized milk instead of water and served as a morning cereal with rich, whole milk or cream, the two form an ideal food almost impossible to improve upon. The morning is not started right without a cooked cereal.

The ready-cooked breakfast foods lack the appetizing flavor which one gets in the home-cooked kinds. Then, too, the former are at least twice as expensive as the grains which need steaming, and when there are hungry children this is an item. The cereal which is allowed to simmer all night in the double-boiler on the back of the range—in pasteurized milk—is a breakfast in itself.

Oatmeal deserves to be the stand-by in every home, but there are others which may supplant it now and then for sake of variety.

TO F. W. GALBRAITH'S MEMORY

Memorial to Late American Legion National Commander is Dedicated at Cincinnati.

On the hills overlooking his home city, Cincinnati, stands a memorial to Frederick W. Galbraith, deceased national commander of the American Legion—killed in line of duty. This memorial takes the form of a parapet on which is a bronze tablet. Behind are the ashes of the former Legion head. It was erected by the veterans' organization and has become a national shrine for Legionnaires.

Galbraith was killed as he sped by automobile from Indianapolis, headquarters city, to Chicago, with Milton J. Foreman, past national commander, on their way to face a great problem for the veterans' organization. It was on such a mission fraught with good for his nation, that he met his end like the brave soldier he was.

The tomb was formally dedicated by National Commander John B. Quinn on the occasion of his first public appearance after his election. In his address, he characterized the departed leader as the "spirit of the American Legion." Commander Quinn declared that to Galbraith and to the myriads of members of the Legion, the organization means the flesh and blood of America's fighting men, the soul of those who sleep on Flanders field and in the depths of the ocean, and the voice of four million who rallied to their country's flag when it was endangered.

The Legion leader said that the stimulation of the principles of Americanism, as sponsored by the beloved leader, Galbraith, could and would lead the organization to greater heights for the nation.

"The spirit of Americanism takes its beginning, the schools—and the Legion plans patriotic education," declared Commander Quinn. "It takes its place in the home—and the Legion hopes to carry an inspirational message to every freeman in America that patriotism may be better fostered there. The flaming light of Americanism is to be seen in the pupil, in the business world, and in the culmination of national life—so the Legion is ever ready to spread its broad gospel of better homes, stronger love of nation and deeper regard for law into the life of every inhabitant of America—to make all American citizens—not mere residents of a country."

"With the leadership of such consecrated patriots as Frederick W. Galbraith, we have assigned ourselves as guard about this sacred flame of civic spirit, we stand as sentinels about its temples," Commander Quinn said.

Seven foreign countries sent representatives to attend the ceremonies, including representatives of Italy, Japan, Great Britain, France, Spain, Greece and Brazil. The monument was unveiled by Michael Aaronson, a former sergeant-major who served under Galbraith overseas, and who was blinded while in service.

TO STRESS COMMUNITY LIFE

Indiana Legion Department Commander Urges Posts to Undertake Movements for Upbuilding.

"The American Legion will occupy its merited place in public esteem when the veterans become members not for the primary purpose of financial gain," declared E. Arthur Ball, department commander of the American Legion in Indiana, "for the advancement and protection of their rights as veterans, but for the means of more effectively performing their duties as citizens and the helpfulness they can be to their comrades."

Mr. Ball's statement was made in an address to Legionnaires of South Bend, La., dedicating the new Legion home in that city. Head of a great business institution in the state, Mr. Ball has given up his work to head the Legion in the Hoosier state for a year and expects to stress particularly the development of community life through the agency of Legion posts. In his address he said that the strength of the Legion is found on every hand, but that the influence of the organization was still further felt when posts undertook some worthwhile movement for the upbuilding of community life.

"KEEP OUT OF POLITICS"

Boston Editor Urges Legion Men to Fight for Disabled and to Scorn Politicians.

Declaring that the government had only done things for disabled men of the World War "under tush of the Legion," James T. Williams, editor of the Boston Transcript, told a gathering of veterans in Worcester, Mass., that the greatest problem of the Legion was the cure of the disabled men.

The speaker said that no group so sorely needed help of any organization as do the disabled men, particularly those suffering from tuberculosis, and advised his hearers to keep up work in relief of those men.

He told the Legion men that it was up to them to keep the organization free from politics as it has been in the past.

"The two great parties are cursed with men who say that the Legion is fair prey," said Mr. Williams. "They go up and down the state telling how easily the Legion can be handled. These statements are caused by resentment because they cannot get their contaminating claws on the Legion and control it," he concluded.

Very Likely.

A girl seldom has occasion to cry for help when a young man kisses her—probably because he is able to help himself.

THE RULES OF THE ORIGINAL KU KLUX KLAN

The secret rules and regulations of the original Ku Klux Klan during the days immediately following the Civil War are contained in an interesting little document, entitled "Prescript of the " presented to Dr. Wilbert B. Hinsdale of the University of Michigan by President James A. Garfield in 1871. Because of the recent activities of the later organization of the same name, this has become one of the most interesting curios in Dr. Hinsdale's collection. Dr. Hinsdale's copy is perhaps the only one still in existence.

Several differences between the nature of the organization in the days when it first came into existence and the present form, as well as many points of similarity, are shown by the document. Nowhere in it does the name Ku Klux Klan appear, although the titles of the officers in the organization are very similar to those in use today. Article II, which provides for these titles, reads as follows:

"The officers of this " shall consist of a Grand Wizard of the Empire and his Ten Genii; a Grand Dragon of the Realm and his Eight Hydras; a Grand Lion of the Dominion and his Six Furies; a Grand Giant of the Province and his Four Goblins; a Grand Cyclops of the Den and his Two Night-Hawks; a Grand Magi; a Grand Monk; a Grand Exchequer; a Grand Turk; a Grand Scribe; a Grand Sentinel and a Grand Ensign."

A Gift from President Garfield. Each page of the booklet, which was printed before 1867, is marked with a lithographic imprint to insure against forgery, and has a heading and a tail piece in Latin scraps, such as "Fiat Justitia," "O Tempora, Mores," "Cavendo Tutus," etc.

Dr. Hinsdale's copy was secured in 1871, when he was attending Hiram College, at Hiram, Ohio, and was rooming in the house of President (then Representative) Garfield. He had been appointed by his class to write a play, and appealed to his landlord for some information about the Ku Klux Klan on which to base his skit, as Mr. Garfield was at that time a member of the house committee engaged in investigating the activities of the Klan.

"We used considerable of the Ku Klux Klan tom-foolery in the play," said Dr. Hinsdale in relating the story. "It appeared to be a success. It ended with the student Ku Klux Klan actors nailing one of the members of the cast into a coffin so securely that we had to smash in the sides of the coffin after the audience had left to release him."

In the "creed" of the original Klan, members avowed that "We, the " reverently acknowledge the Supremacy of the Divine Being and recognize the Goodness and Providence of the same," while in the preamble it was stated that "we recognize our relations to the United States government and acknowledge the supremacy of its laws."

No one was permitted to become a member of the old organization without taking the following oath of obligation: "I, of my own free will and accord and in the presence of Almighty God, do solemnly swear or affirm that I will never reveal to anyone not a member of " any intimation, sign, symbol, word or act, or in any other manner whatever, any of the secrets, signs, grips, passwords, mysteries or purposes of " or that I am a member of the same, or that I know anyone who is a member, and that I will abide by the Prescript and Edicts of " so help me God."

The prescript ends with the words: "To the lovers of Law and Order, Peace and Justice, we send greeting; and to the shades of the venerated dead we affectionately dedicate the "

PRICES

There is some satisfaction in knowing that necessities of life which cost the average family $1,000 in 1920 can now be bought for $800. Though housing and fuel are higher than they were then, food, clothing, furniture and miscellaneous items have brought down the total.

Nineteen Twenty, however, was an abnormal year—the peak of the boom. When we come to compare present living costs with normal costs before the war, those of 1913 for example, we find that family necessities costing $1,000 then cost $1,720 now. That is, the cost of living is still 72 per cent above the pre-war level.

It may never return to that level. With all the ups and downs of prices, economic history over long periods shows a general tendency upward, usually attributed to the gold standard, on the principle that as the supply of gold in the world increases, the gold itself grows cheaper.

The war has had much to do with keeping prices up, in this case. The diminished supply of goods in the world and the productive capacity of nations have not yet been renewed. There is no good reason, though, for believing that the price level is destined to stay as high as it is. Better production and distribution—everybody working a little harder and more intelligently—would bring prices down.

TAX-REDUCTION FIRST

When Congress assembled in December, it was disposed to postpone tax-reduction and give precedence to the army bonus and certain other measures involving large expenditures. Since the holidays that plan has been changed, and taxation is given first place on the program.

This is the wise thing to do. Revenue measures logically come first, because money has to be raised before it can be spent and there is no knowing how much there is going to be to spend until the system of taxation is established. Also, the public is far more interested in tax-reduction than in anything else before Congress, and would have no patience with any program that deferred action on that question.

The law-makers' vacation has been good for them, giving them a clearer idea of what the country wants. They know now that collectively and individually, they are likely to stand or fall on the tax issue, and that the sooner they report and pass a satisfactory revenue bill the better it will be for their own fortunes.

SCHOOL POSTURES

One of the reasons why physical education in the public school is an essential, and not a frill, is pointed out by an eminent physician. School attendance, he says, without physical direction develops many bodily faults. Round shoulders, bad posture, curved lines, flabby muscles, scrawny figures, etc., troubles, and stomach, kidney and intestinal disturbances are all partially induced by wrong posture at desks or in standing by shallow breathing, by wrong physical habits. They are all largely counteracted by knowledge and practice of physical health and hygiene rules.

In every school, the doctor believes, physical education

AN ARTIST'S QUEST

By FLORENCE DAVIES

Robert Henri, one of the greatest living American painters has just written a book in which he tells us something about his art.

What he says about the sort of people he likes to paint might well set us thinking.

He isn't one of those painters who has discovered just one picture that he knows how to paint and then paints it over and over again with variations. But he does most often paint people. They are people of widely different types, and yet in a way of the same type.

He finds them in Mexico, in Ireland in the desert. Some times it's a little laughing picaninny, or it may be Tony the son of the Italian fruit vendor, or a beautiful girl, or an old lady. But always it must express a kind of dignity.

"But how can a little Italian boy, not old enough to know what the word means, have dignity?" one asks.

Of course it isn't that kind of dignity. It isn't the kind that takes itself seriously and walks with a strut; the kind that is afraid that it will be lost if it breathes a little too hard—that is, the thing of all others that Henri wouldn't paint if he could help it. That is just a pose. And that is exactly what the artist is after.

By dignity he means a kind of sincerity. Whenever he finds people who belong to their environment who are just themselves in the place where they are, untrammelled and unconscious, they have a certain inward dignity.

And all of Henri's people seem to have that kind of unconscious joy in being just exactly what they are. He never yet, for instance, painted any one, whether little Indian boy, or son of New York's East Side, who looked as if he were posing for a picture, or posing for anything, for that matter.

"Art," says Henri, "is wherever life exists and expresses dignity, humor, humanity, kindness, order."

I'm afraid then that the bluffers and the four-flushers wouldn't stand much chance of having this artist paint them. He is looking for greatness. Yet he doesn't seek out college presidents and diplomats, judges of the supreme court, or the great of the business world and the stage. No, he takes a little unconscious Mexican lad, or a gypsy. Why? Because the greatness he is looking for is the greatness of sincerity, the greatness that comes from being the best of just what you are, of fitting your place in life perfectly of being supremely true to type.

It's a greatness that puts sham and pretense, make-believe and bluff, the empty strivings of the climber, beneath the efforts of the artist.

Farley Declares Lawyers Deliberately Selected British Ship For Trip

Washington, Jan. 14 (INS).—The American Bar Association deliberately selected a British ship for its trip to London this summer although the United States Shipping Board offered to meet every condition given by its foreign competitor, Chairman Edward T. Farley, of the Shipping Board, reported today to the Senate in reply to a Senate resolution.

Farley declared the Shipping Board laced the Leviathan American "Mississippi of the Seas" at the Bar Association's convenience and offered to cut its rates to meet the British offer but that the law organization picked a British vessel regardless.

PEACE AND THRIFT

The anniversary of Benjamin Franklin's birth, January 17, has come to be observed as the principal day of an annual "Thrift Week" during which the nation's attention is called to matters of private and public economy.

Benjamin Franklin is one of our national heroes worthy of a great deal of study. Kites and keys and lightning rods and wise sayings compose the average school child's knowledge of Franklin's usefulness. That he was one of the greatest diplomats this country has ever had is less common knowledge. Important as was his part in our War of Independence he was deeply interested in promoting peace. In 1792, when living in Paris, Franklin printed a pamphlet entitled "Conciliation of the Nations of Europe, or a Project for Perpetual Peace."

Consideration of this fact suggests the thought that perpetual peace and thrift are not at all unrelated subjects. Disarmament, such as has already been undertaken, with regard to certain types of battleships, represents a very practical sort of thrift—and peace promotion—which the nations would do well to study further and expand to include the army and air services.

Correct Diagnosis First Need Says "Cal" Of Agricultural Ills

Chicago, Jan. 14 (INS).—A correct diagnosis is the first preliminary toward remedying the plight of the American farmer, President Coolidge wrote to the farmer-manufacturer association's national convention which opened today in Chicago. That diagnosis has been found in cooperation between farmer and manufacturer, President Coolidge added.

In expressing regret at being unable to attend the two-day meeting, which every state is represented, the President wrote:

"The plight of the farmers in recent years has been and will continue to be a means of relieving agriculture, a menace to the prosperity of every other element in the community."

TRADE-RECORD WE LIGHT THE WORLD

American electric lighting supplies go to 100 countries and colonies in every part of the globe. Our exports of "incandescent lamps" in the last decade number more than 100,000,000.

The United States is lighting the world. Its electric lights twinkle in a hundred different countries, colonies, protectorates, mandated territories and island communities, literally the world over. To Iceland at the far north, to the southernmost communities of Africa, South America and Oceania and to all the countries and colonies lying between those extremes the manufacturers of the United States are sending millions of dollars worth of electrical lighting appliances. It was only in 1913, says the Trade Record of the National City Bank of New York, that the exportation of electric lighting apparatus was deemed of sufficient importance to warrant mention in the export records of the country, and in that year the number of "incandescent lamps" exported was less than 3,000,000 with a value of a half million dollars, yet the total number of lamps exported from the beginning of 1913 to the end of 1923 is more than 100,000,000 and their value, in round terms, $25,000,000.

Where do they go, these 100,000,000 American incandescent lamps? Literally to every part of the world, for the one hundred countries, colonies, protectorates, mandated territories and islands to which they have been sent include practically every political division or community the world over. To Europe alone the list of countries to which they were sent in the latest year for which details are available was 26, to North America other than the United States 25, to South America every one of the 13 countries and colonies, to Asia 16, to Africa a dozen, and to Oceania a half dozen specified areas, to say nothing of the many smaller islands included in the general group "all other Oceania."

And it appears that the American incandescent lamp finds favor even in the most advanced of the great manufacturing countries, for in 1920 the number of "metal filament" lamps alone sent to England was 507,000, to Belgium 746,000, to Italy 330,000, and to Europe as a whole approximately 2 1/2 million. Canada which buys freely of all of our manufactures took in 1920 nearly 4,000,000 incandescent lamps, 1921 at 2,470,000 with a total value of $59,728,398, against approximately 1913 to the end of 1923 is

Argentina 1 1/2 million, while the number taken by Australia in 1921 aggregated considerably over a million. And this use of electric lights by no means is confined to the larger or more advanced countries, for Iceland and the Faroe Islands took in 1912 over 12,000 lamps; Hejaz, Arabia in 1921 over 3,000; Palestine approximately 2,000, and our own Virgin Islands over 4,000.

This growing use of electric lights the world over illustrates, says the Trade Record, the tremendous development in the utilization of electricity in all the many forms in which it is now made useful to man. This growing world demand for electrical appliances and machinery is evidenced by the fact that our exports of the group officially designated as "electrical machinery and appliances" has aggregated about $650,000,000 in the last dozen years, and the distribution has been absolutely worldwide. The capital of the factories producing electrical machinery, apparatus and supplies is reported by the census as $857,855,000 in 1919 against $83,660,000 in 1899, or ten times as much in 1919 as 20 years earlier. The latest census report shows the total number of incandescent lamps manufactured in the United States in 1921 at 247,000,000 with a total value of $59,728,398, against approximately 1913 to the end of 1923 is

Livestock & Chase, on behalf of the Hileman Coal Company, began a suit in Prothonotary-Casson's office this morning against H. L. Swope, Chas. S. Saff and Reuben Hegarty, trading as the Phoenix Coal Company, in an effort to recover the sum of $13,762.45. The plaintiffs allege is due them for coal wrongfully removed from land under lease by them. The coal used for it is alleged was taken from three tracts under lease by the Hileman Company from Elizabeth S. Lewis and Clara Hileman and located in Bigler township. The statement filed with the notice of suit alleges that not only did the defendant company not only break into their mine and remove the coal wrongfully but they removed pillars and caved the workings so that the rightful owners could not get their coal out.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE AWKWARD AGE

"Cackle, cackle," said young Miss Hen. "I feel sorry for children when they become a certain age."

"Why not?" inquired Red Top, the rooster, "pray tell me why so, young Miss Hen, cackle-a-doodle-do, it would be interesting to know why you feel sorry for children."

"When they become a certain age," said young Miss Hen. "Well, then, when they become a certain age," Red Top repeated. "I'd like to know why you feel sorry for them at such a time or why you have felt sorry for them, or why you will feel sorry for them—if you are going to keep on feeling sorry for them."

"And then, too, I'd be interested in hearing what age children must reach in order to have you feel sorry for them."

"Do you suppose they are thankful and pleased that you feel sorry for them at that age? Are they in need of sympathy then?"

"Well," said young Miss Hen, "I will answer all your questions. First of all I feel sorry for children when they reach a certain age because I understand them. In other words I have a fellow feeling for them."

"I don't see," said Red Top, "how a young hen can have a fellow feeling for a lot of children."

"I mean," said young Miss Hen, "that I understand how they feel because I too have had the same feelings."

"Little children are always so much admired. They are thought so cunning and if they're naughty they seem to be very quickly forgiven and they're hugged and loved and made great pets of and everyone thinks they're so sweet and pretty and dear and lovable."

"Then they become a little older. If they're bad they're scolded good and hard. They're not thought nearly so cunning and they're not thought nearly so sweet, nor so lovable, nor so dear, nor are they smiled at almost at all times."

"Sometimes it is said they have reached the awkward age. I do not know what age it is or just when it comes but it is the age between being a little child and a big boy or girl."

"It comes at different times, or at different ages, not always at the same time with everyone. I do not know whether children are thankful and pleased that I have so much sympathy for them at such times or not, but I have at any rate. And the reason for it is this. Yes, this is the reason why I so thoroughly understand, and I know how they feel when they're not admired as they have been and I know how it makes them feel only more awkward. You see when I was a little chick I was a dear, plump, fuzzy, running little thing."

"I had soft yellow down and I was really quite sweet. I realize it now that it has gone from me. Then I became older. I couldn't help it. It was not my fault. And I grew. My shape was awkward and I moved awkwardly. If I humped into anything or ran in a silly way I was called silly, but if I had done the same thing as a little chick I would have been thought a poor, dear, frightened little chicken."

"And as I became older I became more and more awkward and more and more I realized that people thought of me as being a pretty unattractive hen."

"Then I heard some people talking about some children who had grown from babyhood into boyhood and girlhood. They said these children had been so cunning when they had been little but that now they were at the awkward age."

"And I've seen so much of it since—unappreciated children because they're not little and cunning, and it's the same way with hens! The very same way. Ah, it is a great shame!"

"Hens are awkward, too, before they become older, settled hens. They understand how children feel. Ah yes, young hens are sympathetic. They know what it is like to use their dear little chick ways and looks and to be thought so much less attractive and not loved in the same indulgent, affectionate way."

"Now I understand," said Red Top, "and I don't wonder you have a fellow feeling," as you call it, for children."

The new foot bridge across Anderson Creek is now ready for placement just as soon as the water recedes sufficiently for putting down the spans. The people on the south side of the creek have been put to considerable inconvenience by the washout in getting over to this side of town, especially the school children who have been compelled to go around quite a distance in order to get to the several school buildings. The new foot bridge is being planted on a more solid foundation than the first one was, and it is not likely that high water or lumbering of ice against it will remove it as easily as the first one.

The numerous and rapid changes of the weather within the week past has caused a great deal of sickness in this county and every town physician is constantly on the go, both day and night. Severe lung colds and pneumonia seem to be the leaders in most of the afflicted ones. Rain one day, warm the next and cold and snow the third day seems to be playing the very devil with people who seldom before in their lives have had an ache or bodily pain. The death rate in this community for the month of December and thus far in January has far exceeded that for the same length of time during last year.

Miss Ellen Sykes, of Sykesville, Pa., was a visitor at the home of R. G. Bilger, Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Mary Jane Askey Norris, widow of Thomas S. Norris, who died during the spring of 1889, celebrated her 84th birthday at her old home, located between New Millport and Kermoor and now owned by her son, B. W. Norris, on last Saturday, January 12th.

Her husband, Thomas S. Norris, lumbered during his early days on Montgomery Creek for a number of years, giving the old Norris camp at the head of Montgomery its name. In 1874 he purchased the William McCracken farm as above located and lived there until his death of pneumonia in 1889.

Mrs. Norris has lived on the old farm ever since, having complete charge of the farming until about 20 years ago when her son B. W. Norris bought the place, but Mrs. Norris retained her home with him. Mrs. Norris is the mother of 14 children, four of whom died in infancy. Miss Mrs. Alfred Erhard, died at the Wright place, between Curwensville and Clearfield, Nov. 23, 1880, and Miss Minnie died at the age of 16 in 1893, Feb. 27th. This leaves eight children still living. All were present at the commemoration of Mrs. Norris' birthday except Laura, who is in Eureka Calif., Nora, Mrs. J. F. Sohl, coming all the way from Livingston, Montana, to be present. The living children in order of their age are as follows: Nora, Mrs. J. F. Sohl; Perry A., of New Millport; Mrs. Joe Fricke, Eureka, Calif.; Wade A., of New Millport; Grant, of Curwensville; Ella, Mrs. G. M. DeHaas, of Philadelphia; Blake W., now on the old homestead; May, Mrs. George L. Thurston, of Clearfield. Besides the above children the following neighbors, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, and wives were present: Mrs. Perry Norris, Mrs. Wade A. Norris, Mrs. Grant Norris, Mrs. Blake W. Norris, Mr. George L. Thurston, grandchildren, Mrs. Erma (Eldon) Bell, Mrs. Marie (Lemoyne) Hile, Miss Delta Norris, great-grandchildren, Miss Gertrude Bell, neighbors, Mrs. Isaac Wolf, Mrs. Ward Shamp, Miss Rachael Shamp, 21 in all.

Mrs. Norris is in fairly good health and enjoyed the big turkey dinner equally with her children and friends. Some years ago she made a visit to her daughters, Nora, in Livingston and Laura, in California, and her ambition ever since is to make a second visit in the far west, and as she says "do a little homesteading out there."

She is bright and alert and most entertaining on the early lumbering history of Clearfield county. May be spared to enjoy many more such birthdays.

Bald Eagle Valley Man Is Placed In Jail On A Charge of Burning House To Obtain His Insurance

John Marks, for many years a resident of upper Bald Eagle valley was placed in the Bellefonte jail a few days ago on a charge of arson. He was taken into custody near Altoona. State police are gathering evidence against Marks as they continue their investigation of another serious affair, according to Justice J. M. Keichline, of Bellefonte, before whom information of the charge of arson was made by the state police.

The arson charge grows out of a fire which recently destroyed buildings on Mr. Marks' property which were amply covered by insurance. A policy of $2,600 on the property had been taken out at Tyrone by Mr. Marks, and the insurance committee had the investigation made before considering payment as the explanation of the cause of the fire was not satisfactory.

A DISASTROUS FIRE NEAR PORT MATILDA

The big dwelling on the hill to the right of the town of Port Matilda, known as "The Bigelow House" burned to the ground on Tuesday night, January 8th. It is said the small children piled a lot of straw on the back porch and then set it on fire. Becoming frightened they ran for help. The father was away working and the mother was at a neighbor's home, where there was sickness. Before the fire fighters arrived, the building was a mass of flames and was soon reduced to ashes.

Neckties were invented so that the women would have something to buy for a man's Christmas gift.

A man may not know what he wants for Christmas, but a woman has no such problem to perplex her.

A Case of Adornment

A lady loves her jewel case, for treasures it contains; rings, earrings to adorn the face, tiaras, lockets, chains; and a bracelet watch to fit the wrist, necklaces, strings of pearls, a diamond brooch or amethyst, unfit for younger girls. But what's the jewels be, their value, it is clear, is great, as readers will agree if they have bought them here.

Why be Feeble?

ADVANCING years should not mean the approach of a period of debility—of weakness and cause of worry, care and trouble. Be prepared to grapple with the battle men of Old Age—with rheumatism, with undiminished health—with feebleness. The secret that is free from impurities—through which a rich red blood tinged with iron and vitality—will enable you to enjoy the advantages of pure vegetable ingredients and is sold at all good drug stores. IN A LEGATEE'S SHOES ly likely to encounter one of those travelers from whom adventure could be drawn. Those who had money would have found some asylum, while the poor slunk in arches where I would not find them. Somewhat reluctant to turn to the value of my long vigil, I turned toward the north to lay my home.

The tower was almost absolute. Sometimes, in the distance, an automobile passed. At times a faint rumble was thrown up by a train from the station nearby. But not a human being was about. Only for a while did a neglected cat, here to sudden follow me, whining piteously.

My route took me through comfortable streets, where the houses exhibited charming curtains, and where shrubs protected modest respectability from the intrusion of my eyes. There was nothing for these eyes to see, but I was led by a turned-out Viking square, red as the brick, with luck I might discover a taxi at the other end. Viking Square is a large and comfortable district of its own, centered round a neglected garden, where grow a few trees. In the middle is a tennis lawn, used by the young men of the neighborhood. The square is the heart of the community. Tonight, the emphasis of the court turned west, and miserably about fell the drags from the tall frontages of the houses. All these were alike, five stories, and varying in color between the jet blackness of age and new white paint. The square had an air of wealth, for at least one of the houses was Nottingham curiel, and there, large boxes of mail, some marked and others suspicious.

so that I might not be observed could see her more clearly now. It was that most symbolic figure in English household: a respectable elderly personage, with a light-colored hair and showed a while, but well-starched apron stood out in stiff folds. What was she doing? The idea of so respectable a servant standing in the drizzle upon the steps of a house at this hour was preposterous. Evidently she was waiting for somebody. Loosely he yearned for her approval, but she looked so likely, so thoughtful, I knew that should a strange circumstance, and perhaps never stand in the way of passion. Still she was watching. I wondered for a moment whether she was accomplice of thieves, and had grown impatient; but then she would commit the folly of standing in full light.

I have learned this much in a turn of adventure, that ten seconds of observation is better than an hour of observation. So I carefully leaped myself from the lamp and treaded loudly to draw her attention, went up the square. She took my footstep, the noise turned toward me. Her attitude, stooping a little forward, was telling. No doubt she was short-sighted, took me for the person for whom she was waiting. As I came close she seemed to hesitate, took a step toward the house, then came back was quite as certain. I turned and saw the thin old face and the tremor neatness of her clothing was determined to know what was doing here, and prepared to stop, intending to ask her my

"Not Charlie?" I asked. "What you?" I asked. "But I caught in his uncertainty, on his lips the deplotation, which I had perceived in mad.
"Don't be absurd," I said, but an amiable tone. "I know quite that I'm not Charlie, and so do and you know I know. But I mind . . . going further with if you like."
His eyes seemed to measure
"I don't see how I can," he replied.

est and most thrilling games seen on

The Reed machine worked with wonderful precision in the extra square yard playing in finest form. Pete Barnett, a forward registered seven times from the field and proved himself the local "two gun man, while his floor work was also of excellent type. Bill Wilson, his running mate, played the role of a game also, while his shooting garnered him 12 points. Nick Brown "did his stuff" in the same line, fighting, also, earning 12 points for his share in three periods, while Bill Boyce, his assistant, jumped into the second column when he could get a fling.

"Yes, We Have No Bananas," a burley show, assuming the aforementioned title, rather than being called "Fred Rider's Hoot Owls," is something more appropriate, played to a big audience at the Jefferson Theatre, Punxsutawney, last evening. The audience seemed to be very much pleased with the efforts of the

The title of the show was enough to condemn it, and people naturally thought they would see something awful. In this it was agreeably surprised. There was nothing out of the ordinary in connection with the show on the players, except that the lines were a little broad, the costumes "screwed" abbreviated and the girls better looking than those in most musical comedies.

At that, however, the girls were more clothes than girls do in most any musical show in New York. I
